The cornerstone of the church is Christ himself, and he offers us encouragement even today. If he is going away, it is to prepare a place for us in his Father's house, which has many rooms. So there is a place for us all in the kingdom. Each person has gifts of nature and grace, each should have a say in church life, as exemplified by the apostles in the first reading.

Many people today regard faith as irrelevant because their notion of God is faulty or distorted. For an authentic picture of what God is like, we should look to Jesus who said "I am in the Father and the Father is in me." He shows what the invisible Father is like: concerned for all, interested in all, respecting everyone, calling sinners back home. Him.

5th Sunday of Easter

May 3,2026

“Love’s longing is the preparation of the dwelling” (Augustine, Homilies on John 68.3). Saint Augustine speaks these words to his congregation sixteen hundred years ago about the very same Gospel we have just heard. Our Lord Jesus speaks to his apostles at the Last Supper about his moving on: “I am going to prepare a place for you,” he says. No one likes departures. Jesus knows this about us because he has made us and so he says, “Do not let your hearts be troubled . . . I will come back again and take you to myself, so that where I am you also may be.” Thomas wants assurances. He wants to know the way for himself, lest he be forgotten. He says, “Master, we do not know where you are going; how can we know the way?” Jesus responds, “I am the way and the truth and the life.” Philip accepts this assurance and wants to use it as a shortcut, saying, “Show us the Father.” Jesus will allow no shortcut. He knows what he is creating within his apostles because he has first made them. Christ Jesus is generating love. He is stirring great love into the hearts of his apostles by making them yearn for the place he is going and for his return from that place, so they may be with their friend and Lord forever. “Love’s longing is the preparation of the dwelling,” Augustine says.

The works of love, the works of the Church’s yearning for her groom’s return in glory, themselves generate more yearning. Philip wants a shortcut but Jesus tells him, “Amen, amen, I say to you, whoever believes in me will do the works that I do, and will do greater ones than these, because I am going to the Father.” The saints have done this. They have healed the sick and raised the dead. They have fed the poor and visited the lonely. They have brought the good news of salvation and built a universal Church. They have given all those whom they have touched the desire to know the Christ who works through them. All want to know Jesus. We want our world to be a suitable partner for his kingdom. He holds off so that every generation may learn, in its own way, that only Christ himself can satisfy us. By his delay, he is bringing our desire to perfection, so that when he does come again, we will want nothing but him. “Our hearts are restless until they rest in you,” Augustine says to God. ( homiletics Rev. Peter A. Heasley, S.Th.D. )
