The Good Shepherd

Dear brethren in Christ, as we reflect on today's readings, let us ask ourselves: Are we truly listening to the voice of the Good Shepherd? Are we following Him with trust, or are we allowing ourselves to be distracted by the world and be led astray by its false promises? Do we strive daily to live for God, to imitate Our Lord Jesus Christ in His virtues and live his life? Or do we prefer to live for ourselves, following no one else but the voice of our selfishness and disordered self-love and passions?

4th Sunday Reflection

Today, the Fourth Sunday of Easter traditionally known as "Good Shepherd Sunday", has a special significance for us who are gathered in this Saint Patrick church.

Jesus speaks of himself as the Good Shepherd who gives eternal life to his sheep (cf. Jn 10: 28). This image of the shepherd is deeply rooted in the Old Testament and dear to Christian tradition. The Prophets attributed to David the title: "Shepherd of Israel", which hence possesses an indisputable messianic importance (cf. Ex 34: 23).

Jesus is the true Shepherd of Israel, since he is the Son of Man who desired to share the condition of human beings to give them new life and lead them to salvation.

Significantly, the Evangelist adds to the term "shepherd" the adjective kalós, good, which he only uses with reference to Jesus and his mission. In the account of the Wedding at Cana, the adjective kalós is also used twice to signify the wine offered by Jesus, and it is easy to see it as a symbol of the good wine of messianic times (cf. 2: 10).

"I give them (that is, to my sheep) eternal life and they shall never perish" (Jn 10: 28). These are the words of Jesus, who had said a little earlier, "the good shepherd lays down his life for his sheep" (cf. Jn 10: 11).
