It is easy for the Christian to take a self-righteous attitude toward the world; it is much more difficult to take Jesus' attitude: "Neither do I condemn you: go and do not sin again." All of us have contributed to the darkness of the world; none of us can cast the first stone. Easter is on its way. God is preparing a new world order for us: "Remember not the events of the past, the things of long ago consider not; see, I am doing something new!" Having done our part to bring the darkness, will we now participate in doing something new?

Let the Scriptures Speak

5th week of Lent

“Let the one without sin be the first to throw a stone”

How does it happen that a group of men catch a woman “in the very act” of committing adultery, and only the woman is apprehended? What happened to her partner? Was he too fast for the witnesses? Already the scenario is suspect. And if the scribes and Pharisees are bent on justice, why do they bring the alleged adulteress to Jesus rather than to one of their legal officials? They refer to the fact that the Law of Moses mandates the death penalty in such a case and ask what Jesus has to say. Has Jesus developed the reputation of being “soft” on offenders and they hope to catch him in violation of the Torah by pleading for her pardon?

The Evangelist says, “They said this to test him, so that they could have some charge to bring against him.” What is the test? If, as some scholars think, the Roman government had taken from the Sanhedrin the right of capital punishment, then Jesus' questioners may think they are putting Jesus in a no-win situation. On the one hand, if he advocates stoning, he puts himself at odds with the Roman officials, who no longer permit such activity. On the other hand, if he advocates that she not be stoned, he would appear to deny the law of Moses and thereby put himself in a bad light with Jewish officials.
